

APPLICATION PROCEDURE AND ADMISSION FOR LL.M PROGRAMME INTERNATIONAL ECONOMIC LAW

Leuphana University welcomes German and international applicants. The LL.M programme International Economic Law offered by Leuphana Graduate School and the University of Glasgow is subject to general admission requirements and special academic prerequisites differing from other Masters programmes at Leuphana University. ENTRY REQUIREMENTS

First university degree

A general admission requirement is to demonstrate your qualification by holding a Bachelor of Laws (LL.B.) or a Bachelor degree with predominantly legal components, the First State Examination, or an international equivalent. Even if you have not completed your Bachelors degree, you may apply for the Masters programme. You have to prove successfully completed courses at 81% of the required total performance (total performance of 180 CP = 145 CP or 210 CP = 170 CP depending on your study programme). In case of acceptance, you have to hand in your diploma by the start of the Masters programme, at the latest.

SELECTION PROCEDURE

If the number of applicants, who fulfil the required entrance criteria, exceeds the number of students to be admitted, places are assigned through a selection procedure. In doing so, certain selection criteria are considered, which are converted into points respectively. Based on the attained points a ranking is prepared. In case two applicants have the same number of points, the ranking on the list will be chosen by lot. The following criteria will be considered for the selection procedure.

Final Grade of First University Degree (Bachelor or equivalent)

A maximum of 30 points can be achieved with the final grade. If the final grade is not yet available at the time of the application, but a minimum of 81% of all relevant exams has been successfully completed, the preliminary grade point average (GPA) will be considered in the selection procedure.¹

¹ 81% of the relevant examinations of a three-year bachelor degree usually correspond to 145 credit points according to ECTS. The GPA submitted in the application process will be considered in the selection procedure, even if the final grade subsequently differs from the preliminary GPA.
