

Workshop on Microeconomics – Call for Papers

Lüneburg Workshop in Economics, March 3-4, 2022

We are pleased to announce the 2022 Workshop on Microeconomics hosted by the Institute of Economics, Leuphana University of Lüneburg, Germany. The purpose of the workshop is to bring together scholars working in all areas of labor economics, personnel economics, behavioral economics, managerial economics, and other related fields, to create a network which will benefit all participants and to stimulate research in these fields. We welcome both empirical and theoretical contributions.

The workshop will be held at Leuphana University on March 3-4, 2022. There will be an additional social program on Friday evening for those participants travelling back on Saturday. On behalf of the organizers Luise Görge, Boris Hirsch, Mario Mechtel, and Christian Pfeifer, we would like to invite you to come to Lüneburg and attend the workshop.

Deadline for the submission of extended abstracts or full papers is December 31, 2021. Preference will be given to full papers. Please send your contribution as a PDF to mechtel@leuphana.de. Authors will be notified no later than January 14, 2022 as to whether their contribution has been accepted for the workshop.

We will (prospectively) charge a participation fee of 100 Euro that will cover coffee and drinks, lunches on Thursday and Friday, and the conference dinner on Thursday evening. More information will be available at the institute's website (<http://www.leuphana.de/en/institutes/ivwl.html>) soon. Please contact Mario Mechtel if you have any questions.

For more information about the last workshops on Microeconomics, please visit <https://www.leuphana.de/institute/ivwl/lueneburg-workshop-in-economics.html>.