

Workshop on Microeconomics – Call for Papers

Lüneburg Workshop in Economics, March 6-7, 2025

We are pleased to announce the 2025 Workshop on Microeconomics hosted by the Institute of Economics and the School of Public Affairs, Leuphana University of Lüneburg, Germany. The purpose of the workshop is to bring together scholars working in all areas of behavioral economics, labor economics, and other related fields, to create a network which will benefit all participants and to stimulate research in these fields. We welcome both empirical and theoretical contributions.

The workshop will be held at Leuphana University on March 6-7, 2025. On behalf of the organizers Luise Görges, Boris Hirsch, and Mario Mechtel, we would like to invite you to come to Lüneburg and attend the workshop. There will be an additional PhD workshop hosted by the Research Cluster Behavioral Economics and Societal Transformation (www.en.wissenschaftsraum-verhalten.de) on March 5.

Deadline for the submission of extended abstracts or full papers is December 20, 2024. Preference will be given to full papers. Please send your contribution as a PDF to mario.mechtel@leuphana.de. Authors will be notified no later than January 17, 2025 as to whether their contribution has been accepted for the workshop.

We will (prospectively) charge a participation fee of 120 Euro that will cover coffee and drinks, lunches on Thursday and Friday, and the conference dinner on Thursday evening. More information will be available at the institute's website (<http://www.leuphana.de/en/institutes/ivwl.html>) soon. Please contact Mario Mechtel if you have any questions.
