

Notes on the publication and mandatory deposit copies of doctoral theses

The doctoral regulations of the faculties of the Leuphana University of Lüneburg regulate, in § 16, the publication and mandatory deposit copies of doctoral theses (Leuphana Gazette No 11/09, 9 June 2009).

After the successful doctoral procedure, a doctoral thesis must be made accessible to the academic community in an appropriate manner. Handing-in free mandatory deposit copies to the Library fulfils this requirement.

What you must hand-in at the library:

- a) 80 copies in book or photo print for distribution purposes (DIN A 5, bound); or
- b) if the publication appeared in a journal, then you must deposit 6 copies and hand-in a written confirmation from the supervisor that the publications submitted include the main results of the doctoral thesis, as well as a written confirmation from the editor, in case of journal articles as yet unpublished*; or
- c) deposit 6 copies if a commercial publisher takes over the distribution via the book trade and provide a written proof by the publisher (usually by handing-in a copy of the publication contract) that it will be published with a print run of at least 150 copies, on the back of which the publication must be identified as a doctoral thesis, indicating that it is a university thesis: plus: Lüneburg, Univ. Leuphana, Diss., 200X*; or
- d) deposit 6 copies if the dissemination of the doctoral thesis is carried out over by a commercial publisher as 'publication-on-demand', if a dissertation note is included, if an ISBN entry is made and if a guarantee regarding the availability of ordered books is guaranteed for at least four years and if a corresponding written proof of the publisher is provided*; or
- e) 4 complete original versions printed on non-ageing, wood- and acid-free paper and permanently bound in a durable way, as well as an electronic version in pdf format on a suitable data carrier. The doctoral candidate declares s/he agrees with the publication of the doctoral thesis by electronic means via the library network. Further publication and exploitation rights of the author shall remain unaffected^{1*}.

*For doctoral candidates of the faculty: Business and Economics is valid from a-e) 1 additional copy for the faculty.

What we give you in return:

To prove to your faculty that your thesis has been duly published, the University Library will provide:

A Confirmation of receipt of mandatory copies corresponding to the type of publication (a-e) you have chosen.
