The research projects funded by the DAAD and the World Bank deal with entrepreneurship training in developing and emerging countries. In the research projects, training measures are developed and evaluated. This is done in cooperation with universities and other partners in Africa. The studies aim to identify the effect of entrepreneurship training and the underlying mechanisms. This is done in multi-year longitudinal studies.

Your tasks:

- Development and implementation of Entrepreneurship Trainings
- Coordination of training development with partner universities
- Conduction of workshops for the development and implementation of trainings
- Development and implementation of the research design
- Coordination / monitoring of data collection on site
- Ensuring data quality and analysis of data
- Publication of the scientific results within the framework of a cumulative dissertation is possible

Your profile:

- You have an above-average academic degree in the field of work and organizational psychology or applied psychology or in a related field
- You are interested in the fields of entrepreneurship, training and research in developing countries
- You have a very good understanding of scientific literature and have the ability to quickly become familiar with a new topic

- You are excellently qualified in statistical procedures (for example, for multilevel analysis)
- You have strong communicative skills and a secure presence
- You have very good knowledge of English in both written and spoken
- You value independent work and have an interdisciplinary approach
- You show above-average willingness to cooperate in larger research projects and are ready for intensive travel activities

The Leuphana University promotes equal opportunities for women and men and the heterogeneity among its members. Applications from people with severe disabilities are given preference for the same qualification. We look forward to receiving your application.
